The New York Times* Can Help You Teach Your Courses!

Here are some resources for college faculty available from The New York Times.

The New York Times* in Leadership – The site is designed to give teachers, scholars, practitioners and students opportunities to connect leadership concepts to real-world examples. Through news articles, discussion questions, reading lists, video conferences, and other resources, our goal is to will expand understanding of how leadership works in the 21st century. The project covers the following areas of interest – civic engagement, global leadership, business leadership, nonprofit leadership, and policy & politics. <http://nytimesinleadership.com/>

The New York Times* in the First Year – Our site is designed to support efforts to develop student competencies in global awareness, leadership, civic engagement, diversity and ethics. Features include an archive of daily articles with discussion questions and video conferences with journalists at The Times. <http://nytimesinthefirstyear.com/>

Faculty Web site – Our site features faculty writing on using The Times in their courses and a link into The New York Times in the First Year. Here you will find videos and a library of instructional strategies in a range of disciplines, which could help you integrate The Times into your course. www.nytimes.com/edu<<http://www.nytimes.com/edu>>

The New York Times Web site – <http://www.nytimes.com/> An individual subscription is available to faculty, staff and students for only 99 cents for your first 4 weeks and, at an education discount thereafter (as little as $1.88 per week). Please visit <http://www.NYTimes.com/CollegeDS> for more information.

Complimentary Faculty Subscription -- If you are using The Times in a course, please email me a copy of the syllabus where The Times is required reading and I will provide a complimentary digital subscription for the duration of the course.

News Alerts and Emails -- News alerts can be based on topics or keywords. Emails notifications can be enabled to send "Breaking News", "Today's Headlines". etc. Log on in the upper right corner of nytimes.com or click on Alerts under "Tools and More" on the left side of the home page of nytimes.com.

Times Topics – An excellent starting point for research, it provides valuable information on thousands of topics, as well as links to Times articles and to other credible sources. <http://topics.nytimes.com>

Article Archive – The Search function on the nytimes.com home page provides access to the complete back file of The New York Times since 1851. Articles behind the copyright wall from 1922 – 1987 require payment per article; however, New York Times subscribers and readership partners can access up to 100 of these articles per month for free. For more information: <http://www.nytimes.com/ref/membercenter/nytarchive.html>

The New York Times Learning Network – A site for teachers and students in high school and below, but with many useful features for college courses: interactive Daily News Quiz, Word of the Day and a searchable archive of thousands of lesson plans based on New York Times articles. <http://learning.blogs.nytimes.com>
